

An aerial photograph of a tropical beach. The beach is a narrow strip of light-colored sand, flanked by dense, lush green vegetation. On the left, there are large, broad-leafed plants, possibly Pandanus. On the right, there are smaller, more varied green plants and trees. Five people are lying on towels or blankets on the sand, sunbathing. They are wearing swimwear. The shadows of the trees and plants are cast onto the sand. The overall scene is bright and sunny.

Did you know?

Delta and Virgin Atlantic are celebrating 10 years of joint venture partnership since the two carriers joined forces in 2014.

The airlines now operate a joint daily schedule of up to 84 daily nonstop flights in both directions between the UK and the US, including up to 33 peak-day departures from London Heathrow to 14 US gateways.

Seven new A330-900s are joining the Virgin Atlantic fleet

From 2027, Virgin Atlantic will receive seven new Airbus A330-900s, as they continue to fly one of the youngest and cleanest fleets across the sky.

This will take the airline to 19 A330neos which are designed to be 13% more fuel and carbon efficient.

By 2028, Virgin Atlantic will have a mixture of 45 next generation aircraft with an average age of just 6.4 years all offering efficiency, comfort, connectivity, and special touches.
